- 1. Christianity Takes Hold
- 2. A New Country and a New Nation
- 3. After the Romans
- 4. Vikings hunt for resources

- 5. New Religion is Spreading
- 6. Another Powerful Empire
- 7. The Map of Europe is Drawn
- 8. Vikings attack other territories

- A. The Dark Ages, or early medieval times, began with the collapse of the Roman Empire in the 5th century C.E.. In 285, the Romans had divided their empire in two: the western half would become Europe; the Eastern half would become the Byzantine Empire. In the west, Germanic tribes formed kingdoms on old Roman lands.
- B. The Germanic tribes included the Angles, Jutes, and Saxons. Their kingdoms set up the borders for much of Europe, as we know it today. They travelled from what is now Denmark to Britain, which the Romans had left in 410. Here, they created a new people – the Anglo-Saxons, and eventually named their country England.
- C. The Byzantine Empire in the east was in its most powerful state in 555. Its capital was Constantinople (now Istanbul in Turkey). The language and culture they practiced was mainly Greek.
- D. Christianity had been the official religion of the Roman Empire since 313. Many of the Germanic tribes had dropped pagan worship to practice their own version of Christianity. The popes of Rome tried to spread Roman Catholicism throughout western Europe. In eastern Europe, they developed their own tradition of Catholic worship.
- E. The people of the north became known as Vikings. They lived in Norway, Sweden, and northern Denmark. The Vikings lived in coastal communities surrounded by mountainous forests. They were skilled at shipbuilding and crafts, and traded with other groups. In the 700s, with resources scarce at home, the Vikings set off in their ships. Norwegians raided the north coast of England, Danes raided the south, and Swedes sailed deep into the river systems of northeastern Europe.
- F. The Muslim prophet Muhammad had united Arabia by the time he died in 632. Under a series of leaders of Islamic states, Islam had conquered all of North Africa. Its Muslim people were known as Moors. In 711, the Moors invaded Hispania, conquered Visigoths, and brought Islam to the edge of Christian Europe.

- G. During the 9th century, the Danes stopped raiding and joined forces with the Vikings from Sweden. They formed a large army and landed in England in 865. They were to conquer new lands. By 871, they had taken East Anglia and York, and threatened Wessex next. The following year, the Vikings, led by Guthrum, invaded Wessex.

What About Esperanto?

When you think of an international language you might think of English. Schools teach English all over the world and it is often the language of international business. But there is another international language – Esperanto!

In 1887, a man called LL Zamenhof wanted to design a language that didn't come from any country and that was purely international. He came up with Esperanto - the language with a predictable grammar and a lexicon derived from common European languages. While earlier lingua francas, such as Greek, Latin, and French, had originated from empires, Zamenhof invented a language that would commit its users to transcend nationalism. Free of imperial or national identity, Esperanto would serve neither dogma nor nationalism, nor arms, nor money but the conscience and reason of its users who had determined to become a better people of the future.

The “international language,” as Zamenhof initially called it, was designed not to replace national languages but to be a second language for the world and unite people. When he designed the language, he made it easy to learn – he thought the basics could be mastered in a week, but it wasn't always easy to find books or teachers in the past. You couldn't learn it at school either. But now, with the internet, it is much easier to find ways to learn Esperanto, like apps or programmes.

In fact, there are over a million speakers of Esperanto around the world. The most interesting thing is that you don't know where they might be – they aren't from a specific country! You have to join Esperanto groups to find other speakers.

There are also a small number of people who have Esperanto as their first language. You might think this is impossible, but it can happen when parents don't have the same language. They learn a completely different one to communicate with at home.

This is what happened to Vito. Vito is 17 years old. His father is from New Zealand and his mother is from Spain. “When my parents met, they couldn't communicate very well. My mother spoke the language of her home area as well as Spanish, and my father only spoke English. He then learnt a little Spanish to help them talk to each other. When I was born, they didn't want me to have a favourite; English or Spanish. So, we all learnt Esperanto! It was the first language I knew. I then went to school in New Zealand and learned more English there.”

Vito also says, “It's really great having Esperanto as a first language. It's like having a secret code that only some people know. And there are great Esperanto groups online. They are full of people from all around the world. We sometimes meet up. There is a group where you can find, and go and stay with, another Esperanto speaker in a different country. So, I can speak Esperanto and learn about a whole new place!”
